

Pang Yan, a student from China, is studying in the master's program at Mogilev State A. Kuleshov University at the Faculty of Pedagogy and Psychology of Childhood, specialty “General Pedagogy, History of Pedagogy and Education”.

My name is Pang Yan, I study in the master's program of the faculty of Pedagogy and Psychology of Childhood at Mogilev State A. Kuleshov University.

My friends often ask me why I chose this particular university instead of one of the universities in Minsk or elsewhere. The fact is that it was very important for me to choose the right specialty for further education and future career. Therefore, before going abroad, I studied carefully the training programs of several universities, and, at last, I chose Mogilev State A. Kuleshov University, since the specialty of this particular university suited me best. I also like the training system and the quality of teaching at the university; I study a lot and practice communication skills in Russian.

The university teachers are very responsive and always ready to help me if I have difficulty in understanding the Russian language or if I have questions about the subjects being studied. When they meet me, they always ask me: how are you, are there any problems? Such attention helps me to adapt in a new country and feel more confident.

The university holds many activities that help me get acquainted with the life of the university, the culture and traditions of Belarus, as well as make new acquaintances among students.

China and Belarus are friendly countries, and Belarus is the most important country in China’s “One Belt - One Way” program.

During my studies, I also had the opportunity to put my pedagogical knowledge into practice and hold classes in teaching the Chinese language and culture to the citizens of Belarus at the Centre for the Chinese Language and Culture of the university.
