Brief content of the academic discipline:

The structure of the academic discipline “Social psychology” has a systematic character and is represented by the following sections: “Introduction to social psychology”, “Social psychology of personality”, “Interpersonal communication relationships”, “Group psychology”, “Social behaviour”. The first section allows us to get acquainted with the subject, purpose, objectives and methods of social psychology, the main stages of its development as a science. The second section includes consideration of the problem of personality in the social world; the connection of behaviour with motivation and social attitudes of the individual. The third section is devoted to the consideration of various aspects of interpersonal communication and relationships; familiarization with the concept of conflict, its structure, dynamics and strategies of personal behaviour in a conflict situation. The fourth section examines the socio-psychological characteristics of a social group, group phenomena and processes. The fifth section allows us to get acquainted with various types of human social behaviour.
