Summary of the content of the academic discipline:

The teaching of the academic discipline "Ownership and other property rights" is aimed at developing students' in-depth theoretical knowledge in the field of a sub-branch of civil law – property rights. In the process of studying the discipline, students should familiarize themselves with the theory of property rights, the grounds for the emergence and termination of property rights, the provisions of national legislation in this area, and the practice of applying relevant provisions. The skills acquired during the study of an academic discipline should include the application of the acquired knowledge in the process of concluding, executing, and terminating contracts aimed at acquiring ownership or alienating a thing, dividing common property, and protecting the rights of the owner or rightful holder.
