International private law is one of the most important disciplines studied in higher legal educational institutions of the Republic of Belarus. This discipline has great general theoretical and applied significance. With the help of the norms of international private law, relations between organizations and citizens of various states are regulated in all possible spheres of public life, economics, science and culture. Therefore, in the modern conditions of the formation of a global economic system, when various cross-border relations make Belarusian society increasingly open, both law enforcement officers, courts, specialists of justice institutions, notaries, lawyers, and lawyers working in government bodies and in various spheres of entrepreneurial activity should know international private law.
