Summary of the content of the academic discipline:

The discipline “Professional ethics of a journalist” is aimed at forming a comprehensive set of knowledge about professional and ethical standards in the creative activity of journalists and the ability to apply and follow them in practice. The discipline is aimed at deepening basic ideas about the specifics of the main professional and ethical problems of journalism, their causes and methods of solution, as well as the formation of practical skills of moral action in the journalistic profession. The theoretical basis of the discipline allows you to form the skills of conducting a comparative analysis of ethical systems regulating professional behavior of a journalist in different systems of journalism, and ethical analysis of professional behavior in difficult situations; developing the ability to make independent, thoughtful and justified moral choices in professional activity.
